Big Dreams Lead to Big Aircraft

Boutsen Aviation Showcases Airbus A319CJ at EBACE 2018

Geneva - May 25, 2018 - When Thierry Boutsen sold his first Piper Cheyenne II in 1997 after finishing his career as an F1 pilot, he never imagined to what great lengths his blossoming company would grow to. Twenty-one years and 355 aircraft later, Boutsen Aviation is proud to present an Airbus A319 Corporate Jet at this year's EBACE, the largest aircraft to be displayed by the company to date. The entire team is thrilled to welcome clients aboard such a prestigious and impressive vessel.

PRESS RELEASE ...

"It's a great opportunity for us" remarks Mr. Boutsen, "the pre-owned ACJ market is very active at the moment, and I am confident we will have a substantial interest from potential buyers."

Boutsen Aviation has up until now closed 355 transactions in 67 countries across five continents, including 130 different models from 17 manufacturers. This will be the 7th ACJ the company has represented, with the first six (three new and three pre-owned) having been sold over the course of the last few years.

This 2009 A319CJ features a stunning interior by Alberto Pinto Design, led by Yves Pickardt, head of the VIP Aircraft Interior Department. From the moment you step on board, you know this is a haven of high luxury. The 4-section cabin allows for 19 passengers (sleeps 13) with a forward lounge area, dining/living area that converts to conference room, aft lounge, and master bedroom with ensuite washroom. Thanks to the efficient utilization of space and the extent of comfort mixed with fine details, one might not even realize they are cruising at 41,000 feet.
